SALTON SEA PAINTINGS

A note about the Salton Sea.

For many years agricultural runoff from the Imperial Valley has prevented California's largest lake from evaporating. However, starting in January of 2018, this inflow will cease and eventually cause the lake to shrink dramatically, seriously threatening air quality and wildlife habitat for large portions of Southern California. Larry Groff makes this comment about his upcoming exhibit, "I wanted to add my voice to those who celebrate and protect the Salton Sea" This exhibit displays 20+ oil paintings made on site as well as studio inventions which visually explore the mystery and beauty of the Salton Sea.
